Approach 1: Assign students who are guilty of violent behavior around the school to a "big brother" or "big sister" who is a respected older student from another grade. The big brother or sister would teach the student how to behave properly.

Approach 2: Allow students who are guilty of fighting or bullying to go unpunished, hoping that eventually they will learn from their mistakes and correct their behavior.

Approach 3: Have school authorities put in writing rules about unacceptable behavior and assign harsh punishments for violating the rules. For example, students caught fighting will be expelled.
